

Last Day Worked

An employee's resignation date is normally the last day during which the employee works at least one-half of the working day. Any exception to this specific provision must be approved in advance by the Director of Human Resources or designee.