VIII. Problem Solving:

Briefly describe a situation pertinent to the vacant position, doing so in a way that protects the privacy of individuals involved. Ask an open-ended question- one that does not require knowledge of institutional or departmental policies and procedures- about how the applicant would deal with the situation. Encourage the applicant to think out loud and explain the kinds of solutions he or she might try.

An example:

You are working at the front desk of a busy office. You are answering a 10- line phone bank and have an average of 15 walk-ins per hour to direct to appropriate offices and people. At 4 p.m. on a particularly busy day, an outside salesperson approaches your desk at the same time one of the clerks, who is a friend of yours, comes around the corner crying and headed toward your desk. Two outside lines light up at the same time, and the display on your phone tells you the third call coming in is the president's office. What are you going to do?

Another example:

The supervisor of a small work unit that provides service to students is on vacation and, as a result, you are temporarily in charge of the department. One afternoon, you overhear two unit members talking about an incident that occurred one week earlier. They are discussing a new employee in the department, someone you hired, and describe the employee's losing his temper with a student. You suspected the employee in question had a nasty temper but had nothing concrete on which to base the suspicion. This is the first occasion on which you heard of this incident. What would you do about it?
